

To Whom It May Concern,

I see satellite radio as an alternative and as creative and necessary competition to what has otherwise become a very homogenized corporate controlled industry. Companies such as Clear Channel dominate what was traditional radio giving the listener less and less choice of what they can listen to over the airwaves. Clear Channel is also buying up the promotion rights to live music presentations and concert venues throughout the country, further limiting consumer choices.

By opposing measures such as HR 4026 the FCC can begin to undo some of the mistakes it has made in recent years by allowing such monopolies to develop. Please let the consumer decide what is best for itself rather than force feeding us the will of others. The competition satellite radio brings to the playing field should force radio to provide better programming and a wider array of choices for those of us who have turned the radio and TV off altogether.
